Reflection:

What these two people have in common is that they are both desperate for healing and help. What they also have in common is faith. Both believe that Jesus will do what they ask of him. They had no one to whom they could turn except Jesus. Jairus puts his pride and position aside and begs for help. The woman who has spent all she has on treatment is literally spent herself. All she has left is the hope that Jesus will cure her. Such is the quality of their desperation. Such is the quality of their belief and faith in the power of Jesus. When they arrive at the house of Jairus his daughter is dead. But Jesus calmly says, 'Courage, only have faith.' At the word of Jesus the girl rises from her bed and is given back to her father. Jesus did not ignore or dismiss either of them; they came to him trouble but also in faith and he responded with healing and compassion.
